Hey becky I'm confused

eaglekitten160

so yesterday you banned me around noon and then you gave me a warning at three and in that warning you basically told me to leave i don't really understand why the timeline goes ban-warning-told to leave, because I thought a warning is like a not ban and if I keep being mean after the warning then I deserve to get banned but when you ban me then give me a warning and tell me to leave it's like woah plot twist also some of my forum friends did think the whole "telling dynasty to leave" part of the warning was pretty unfair, and I'd gladly give names so you know I'm not making this up

While I didn't think it was fair that becky told you to leave, you need to stop acting out against the wills of other people.

If a Thread is PRIVATE then it should stay so (unless the thread is directly harming somebody- which the threads you were harmfully intruding on were not).

I agree with Grif. If a thread is private, it means it should be private, because not all threads are for everyones eyes.

I'm glad you're asking about this, Dynasty. I apologize that I was somewhat blunt and unclear in the post, esp right before a long weekend. That timing was not ideal for sure.

I don't want you to leave. What I want is for you to decide if you want to be here. You've been around for a while, and been a creative, active part of this place for years. But when I take a look at your recent posts I don't see many RPs, stories, or chats with friends anymore. You don't have to do that stuff by any means, but most of your posts lately are harassing others or saying negative things. That comes across as your not enjoying this place anymore. I'm not saying you can never have a bad day and snap at someone, or see something you think is problematic and make your voice clear, but when those become your sole interactions with the community? It's a problem. The reason I ended up giving you a ban instead of just a warning was due to what you said to Atlas, which I deleted. It was simply uncalled for and bullying.

It's frustrating for me because I respect your history here and I don't want to keep having to give you bans anytime you say something mean until I have to perma-ban you, which in the past was the not-so-great solution to more complicated community matters. That's why I want you to choose: stay for CoI stuff and whatever else you like, but rein in the negativity, or decide that this isn't the right place for you, right now or anymore. I know you hang out with your friends elsewhere, which is why I think the choice is fair. This isn't the only place you can talk to them. You can also 100% choose to ignore this, and continue as you were. But if you do that, I envision the "bans until perma-ban" situation to be the future, and I'd like to avoid that (which is why this terribly longwinded reply exists).

Hope this clears my warning up. I'd much rather you stay and be a part of the community here, but it's up to you and what you think is right for yourself.
